VANITY FAIR SPY CARTOONS

Vanity Fair magazine was the most successful society magazine in the history of English journalism. From 1869–1914, it published chromolithographic caricatures of the key figures of the day. It became a mark of recognition to be the 'victim' of the magazine. Sometimes known as 'Spy' cartoons after the main artist Leslie Ward who used the nom de crayon SPY, there were, in fact, many artists working throughout this period. Please get in touch for the full list of our existing Vanity Fair print stock, a BEAR staple.

Victorian Vanity Fair Cartoon, 'A good sportsman', by Spy, dated Jan 16th 1896

Edwardian Vanity Fair Cartoon, 'Berks and Bucks', by AO, dated Nov 5th 1903
